Washington, Feb. 19.—That Alaska is to have a railroad, built, maintained and operated by the government, and that as a result the vast territory of that comparatively unknown country is to be opened to the world, now seems assured by the action of both branches of congress. The project is of more interest than any other of the kind, and it is expected that it will be the first of a series of similar projects. two notable coal fields larger than any in the United States or possibly in the world. The Behring river field covers seventy-five square miles and the Matanuska field eighty-five. They are practically virgin, only one site having been perfected. The rest belongs to the government and it is the expectation that this land will be opened. The government is willing, and transportation facilities are expected to bring it about. The railroad development will open the coal lands and the coal will furnish the power to operate the railroad and bring about other development. Under present conditions it costs $200 a ton to ship mining machinery to points along the Yukon river and $1 a ton for each mile to transport it into the interior on sleds and by other means.

The opening of mines in Alaska, together with the building of a railroad and the opening of the Panama Canal, it is estimated, will save the government from three to five dollars a ton on its coal burned in the Pacific. It is estimated that the government will save $100,000,000 a year by the opening of the mines in Alaska. The government has a large coal field in Alaska, and it is estimated that the government will save $100,000,000 a year by the opening of the mines in Alaska.

Senator Chamberlain, in meeting the opposition to the proposal that the government go into the railroad business to the extent of $40,000,000, admitted that this would be the first time the government had ever taken a railroad but he argued that the sum involved was small compared to what the government has spent in giving aid to railroads which he estimated at nearly $400,000,000, ten times as much, mostly in land grants.

MID-WINTER STORMS
FLOOD LOS ANGELESHeavy Rains Cause Washouts on All
Railroads, Delaying Traffic—
Orchards Damaged.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Los Angeles, Feb. 19.—Southern California was flooded today as the result of a downpour which started at midnight Tuesday and yielded from six to eight inches of rain in the thirty-two hours ending at 8 a. m. today. Railroad traffic was delayed and in the cities the streets were turned into mill races. Storm drains were overtaxed and irrigation canals widened into rivers.

The storm brought a recurrence of flood conditions that attended the rain fall of a month ago. Railroad tracks on both sides of Santa Barbara were washed out. Bridges also were torn out.

Washouts Block Traffic.
Throughout the citrus belt washouts blocked and stalled trains. The Southern Pacific and Salt Lake and the Santa Fe railroad, the three lines entering Los Angeles, all were compelled to route trains today over a Santa Fe branch running through Fullerton. All other lines were out of commission.

Emmett Osterman, a 13 year old boy, was drowned yesterday at Santa Barbara. This was the only fatality reported here. In some sections Los Angeles streets were under ten feet of water for a brief period. Fire engines were requisitioned to pump out the flooded basements of several large buildings.

One of the telephone companies reported today that 75 per cent of its wires were useless. Arizona virtually was cut off from wire communication.

Damage to Orchards.
Retaining walls at various points in the foothill regions of the orange growing section collapsed under the weight of water and sent floods swirling through the orchards, inflicting great damage.

Several houses collapsed in Los Angeles. In many sections people used Daring Rescue.

Glendora, Cal., Feb. 19.—Frank H. Chance, the Yankee manager, saved the lives of his brother-in-law, Carl Pankake, and two other men in the flood, caused by the storm yesterday.

Charles Gordon and two companions were riding in a motor car when a retaining wall gave way and loosed a wall of water five feet deep on them. The car was overturned and the men swept through an orchard near Chance's place.

Chance witnessed the accident and procuring ropes, floated them down to the men. The men were clinging to trees, and he managed to grasp the ropes and were dragged to safety.

Ostatter then fell to the floor unconscious. A physician pronounced him suffering from epilepsy. After being revived and lodged in the city jail the pawnbroker said his family had attacked him.

The shooting took place at the home of Joseph Coahn, where the Ostatters were living. A suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Ostatter is pending in district court.

DECISION FOR GORE IS WILDLY CHEERED

Oklahoma Senator Completely Exonerated by Verdict in Woman's $50,000 Damage Suit.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 19.—United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore late of Wednesday was exonerated of charges of improper conduct by a verdict in his favor returned in the district court here in the suit for $50,000 damages instituted by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond of Oklahoma City.

The verdict was returned four minutes after the case was given to the jury. Only one ballot was taken.

"We find," the jury stated in the verdict, "the evidence submitted by the plaintiff entirely insufficient upon which to base a suit; that said evidence wholly exonerates the defendant; that the defendant, at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, announced that he desired to introduce no evidence and rested his case, our verdict would have been the same in that event as now returned by us, in the case today.

Mrs. Minnie E. Bond (photographed in court).

The case went to the jury at 5:42 o'clock, after Morton Rutherford, attorney for Mrs. Bond, made the closing argument. Four minutes later a verdict was announced to the jury room.

"We have reached a verdict," the foreman told him.

A hush fell over the courtroom. The jury is coming in, whispered Mrs. Gore, who sat at the front of the court. She leaned over and touched the senator's arm. She was weeping.

"Good," Senator Gore responded. The senator sat upright, listening, his face sober, as it had been all through the trial.

Verdict Is Cheered.
"We, the jury, find for the defendant," read the foreman.

Then the courtroom burst into cheers. The crowd shouted. There were rebel yells and cowboy yells and catcalls, mingled with the stamping of feet, clapping of hands and pounding of umbrellas upon seat backs.

The cheering, it rose and subsided and rose again. Judge Clark smiled. After the demonstration had lasted ten minutes the Judge left the bench.

Court never was adjourned. The judge forgot it. So did the sheriff.

Senator Gore alone remained calm. The crowd shouted. There were rebel yells and cowboy yells and catcalls, mingled with the stamping of feet, clapping of hands and pounding of umbrellas upon seat backs.

PROBE OF DISASTER
RESTS WITH MINERS

Strikers Must Assure Congressional Committee They Expect to Fix Blame for Calumet Tragedy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 19.—Unless counsel for the striking copper miners will assure the congressional committee that they expect to establish the identity of the men they charged with causing the Calumet disaster, a full investigation of the catastrophe probably will not be undertaken.

The committee today continued to hear testimony in support of the charge that constitutional rights of citizens have been violated.

Union Makes Request.
O. N. Hilton of counsel for the Western Federation of Miners today withdrew his request for a full investigation of the Calumet disaster, stating that the congressional committee had decided that "no good purpose could be subserved by such an inquiry" provided the two sides could agree on a statement of fact to be inserted in the record.

End of presentation of the strikers' side was in sight when the committee met. Mr. Hilton announced that counsel expected to conclude today on the subject of the Calumet disaster. Three more days were all the strikers would require he said, one day on the subject of peonage, one day on the subject of the Calumet disaster, and one day on the deposition of Mayor.

To Represent State.
Lansing, Feb. 19.—Gov. Ferris, in a telegram to Chairman Taylor of the congressional investigation committee at Hancock, today said Samuel W. State Seeks to Collect $102,000 and Interest Charges Said to Be Due.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—Milwaukee city and county will resist the attempt of the state to collect $102,000 that the state claims is due for unreported fees. The case has been litigated in the courts for many years. Recently Judge A. C. Eschewer gave a decision awarding an award of $102,000 to the state. This the state has now appealed, claiming that the decision of the court disregarded the fees for 1908, declaring that it was barred by the statute of limitations. The state also collected a certain interest charges should be allowed.

The city of Milwaukee has now filed notice of a cross appeal against the entire amount. The city contends that the county owes it certain fees and that the award, if any, should be directed against the county government.

Down in Australia they have a colored fighter, a middleweight, who at least holds the title for being the most temperamental and the funniest fighter in the game. The fight game here in these U. S. has had some ring comedians, used to make faces at his adversary when he had been laid out on the mat. And Joe Walcott could generally be depended upon to blow the spectators to a laugh or two. But Jerry Jerome, the black middleweight, of the antipodes is said to be the one big laugh of the fight game. He is forty-five years old and weighs in at about 164. Among his queer notions are his habit of telling time by the sun and counting by sevens. If he isn't on time at an appointment he blames it onto the sun. Seven, fourteen, twenty-one and so on are the only figures he will listen to. If he can't borrow seven pounds he'll ask for fourteen. He's one of the best cards in the game in Australia and well liked because of his queer vagaries. He's sure to pull some good stuff in any fight he takes part in. It is said that if he could be made to train he would be one of the champs today, as he has an awful wallop and can take any amount of punishment. But he will wander away to a neighboring town to call on friends or start a crap game the day before a scheduled fight and he generally needs a lot of watching. Not incidentally in a fast and furious fight he will suddenly recall something he had wanted to do and pull his gloves off and say, "Ah gotta go now." He says, "Ah ain't got time to no mo' fighting." And he leaves smoking his rusty old pipe amid the laughs and applause of those present. He couldn't get away with that in this country, but in Australia they understand him.

That Charlie Murphy, the beloved Cobb boss, is a menace to our national diversion is now appearing in large bold headlines throughout the land. For quite a while this opinion was held forth among those who had been in touch with Murphy and his methods, but now there doesn't seem to be a secret about it. Ban Johnson's loud-voiced and heated denunciation of Murphy can have left little doubt in the mind of the latter as to where he will be asked to disembark. Nothing could have been more tactless and reprehensible, says Ban, than Murphy's action in the Evers affair and it's a great injury to the game. And that a club owner should be a detriment to the game is a circumstance that shall not be countenanced, further declares the irate Johnson. If Murphy felt that his club would prosper by his inspiring in the fans a hale and hearty distaste for him he might pursue that policy as long as it didn't injure baseball at large. But he has gone a little too far in his hate-engendering tactics and you can grab it from the penny press, he's going to get it right where Nellie wore her brooch.

story there is not a situation or an utterance that is unclean, vulgar, or palliative of sin.

The basic incidents of the plot are genuine and of record. The scenes will be recognized by everyone who knows about life in the cities. The gradual, logical and inevitable "supply" of girls for the illicit market of lust and lechery is projected, and came the closing scenes showing the spurious glory, the empty delight, the sordid splendors as well as the tragic retribution of "the business" of the panders as well as the less guilty members of "the sad, soiled sisterhood."

A London cat is said to relish feeds of pastry, chocolate, blackberries, tomatoes, egg shells, and even wood as a variety on the general feline fish and meat diet. But many a landlady has credited her cat with even a more catholic taste when her lodger began to think he missed things.

Millions Spent for Soda.
Authorities in the drug business estimate the number of soda fountains in use in the United States at not less than 75,000 and they are said to represent an investment of $60,000,000. The annual receipts of these supplies of soft drinks may total $50,000,000.

IROQUOIS LOSE LEAD IN BOWLING LEAGUE

Maroons Hang Heavy Ballast on Them and Push Them from Top Notch Place.—Mott

The Maroons' bowling team, headed by Captain Edward Kohler, slipped the reverse English on the Iroquois league leaders last night at the Y. M. C. A. alleys, by pushing them from first place in an unevenly matched game. The final score was 2268 to 1834, an difference of 334 pins. Kohler's five rolled an eight hundred game, almost reaching 850. Mott was high man with 197. Captain Booth lost what should have been easy picking, at the rate his team have been going. They could not stand the pace last night. The scores are as follows:

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR"
This Broadway play seems to be in for a big engagement at the Myers theater Thursday, Feb. 19. William A. Brady, who controls the play, is to congratulate on his selection of the players. Neither has Mr. Brady been at all niggardly in the mounting of the play; the four acts are beautifully staged and the surroundings in which the players unfold the story of the play could not help but lend just the right atmosphere. With a play so real and vivid as Mr. Broadway has written, interpreted by a cast of such uniform excellence and staged with such close attention to detail, it is only natural that the theater should be crowded.

"Bought and Paid For" ran for over fifteen months at the Playhouse in New York; six months at the Princess theater, Chicago, and over six months at the New theater, London, England.

"THE TRAFFIC"
"The Traffic" at Rachael Marshall's amazing play, is booked for the Myers theater Thursday, Feb. 24. Miss Marshall, who is a great grand-daughter to Chief Justice Marshall and a colleague and follower of Jane Adams, has written a drama which deals with the traffic in girls in a manner at once truthful, daring and dignified. The truth—admitted only in its acrobacy—marks every scene and line in the play. Nothing exaggerated and nothing cloaked in the story of "The Traffic" unfolds a drama of here and now that will be recognized and approved by the most sophisticated, and that will as astonish and interest thoughtful men and women of all classes by its convincing veracity.

A play for men and women who think, "The Traffic" is also a play that promises to set all sorts of people to thinking, of fine dramatic values, it has not failed to disclose a naked power, to depict in stirring scenes the squalid causes and the false glories of commercialized vice. It may shock the uninitiated, but it will convince them also and it will impress the most blasé with its absolute authenticity and sincerity.

A fine company of experienced and cultivated players has been selected for the local presentation of this extraordinary drama. "Bess" Sany, a young emotional actress from the Pacific coast, is seen in the leading feminine role, while King Strong portrays the difficult "Cadet" role. Perfectly equipped and staged, presented in the most complete and legitimate manner, "The Traffic" will not fail to shock. But it delivers only the shock of truth and with all the realism of its strong

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS.

In the general rush of election time, when the campaigns of the various candidates overshadow all other issues, the average voter forgets to vote on the constitutional amendments or suggestions that appear on the ballot. This year there are ten amendments to the constitution of the state which are to be submitted to the electors of the state at the November election. They have been approved by two successive legislatures and the law provides they shall be submitted by numbers from one to ten in the order given below. The first would make amendments easier. It reads:

Amend section 1 of article VII to provide that when any amendment to the constitution is proposed in either house and approved by three-fifths of the members elect it shall be published for three months and submitted to the people at the next general election and if approved by a majority of the electors such amendment becomes a part of the constitution. As the constitution now is, any amendment must be approved by a majority vote of three-quarters of the members elected to two successive legislatures.

The second sets forth the people shall initiate the laws:

Amend section 1 of article IV so as to provide that the people themselves may propose and enact laws independent of the legislature and to further provide that laws enacted by the legislature, shall, upon a properly filled petition, be submitted to the people before they become effective—providing, however, that emergency laws, shall remain in force, notwithstanding such petition until thirty days after rejection by the people.

The third provides for state annuities and insurance:

To amend article VIII, by providing that the state may grant annuities and insurance upon such risks and in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

The fourth refers to new city charters:

Amend section 3 of article XI by adding a new section authorizing cities and villages to amend their charters and frame and adopt new charters, subject to the constitution and general laws.

The fifth is relative to judicial circuits:

Amend sections 6 and 7 of article VII to authorize the legislature to decrease the number of judicial circuits and authorize the election of one or more judges in each circuit.

The sixth is as to the recall of city officials:

Amend article XIII by authorizing the legislature to provide for the recall of any public official except a judge.

The seventh deals with land for public use:

Amend article XI by providing that when private property has been taken for public use by municipal corporation, additional adjoining land or neighboring property may be taken under conditions prescribed by the legislature by general law.

The eighth deals with constitutional amendments:

Amend article XII by providing that any proposed amendment to the constitution submitted to the legislature shall, upon petition of 10 per cent of the electors of the state be submitted to the electors, or that any proposed amendment approved by a majority of the members elected to the legislature shall be submitted to the people upon petition of 50 per cent of the electors of the state.

The ninth takes up state insurance:

Amend article VIII by adding a new section authorizing the state to grant insurance upon such risks as the legislature may prescribe.

The tenth talks about the salary of the legislators:

Amend section 21 of article IV to provide that the salary of a member of the legislature shall be $800 per annum.

Should the people at the next November election approve amendment No. 1 then it will no longer require the favorable action of two legislatures before an amendment may be submitted to the people, thus shortening the time required to amend the fundamental law from four years to less than two years.

Really this should be enough for the average voter but here are five more that were approved of by the legislature of 1913 and are up to the electors to decide on.

Amend section 10 of article VIII to provide that the state may issue bonds to obtain funds to promote the general welfare of its citizens by making loans to individuals on the security of agricultural lands to assist such individuals to acquire or improve agricultural lands for their own use for farm purposes.

Amend section 1 of article VIII to authorize towns, cities and villages to exempt designated classes of property from taxation.

Amend section 10 of article VIII to permit the state to appropriate money in order to preserve, develop, regulate or improve the navigable waters or streams of the state and to acquire, preserve, regulate or develop the water supply, water powers, lands and forests of the state.

Amend section 25 of article IV by authorizing the state to establish by law a state printing plant.

Amend article IX to provide that the fee of all lands bordering on any meandered or non-meandered stream, river or pond or lake, navigable in fact for any purpose, now or hereafter owned by the state shall forever remain in the state—to reserve all mineral rights, water-power rights, the same never to be alienated, to provide that the right to cut timber or remove minerals from lands of the state shall not be granted to private persons except by a two-thirds vote of all the members of both houses of the legislature.

They say that senatorial possibility Tom Morris is to go down to Washington to get the essence of his campaign announcement. Everyone knew that Tom would have to do that if he expected to be the La Follette choice in the senatorial fight against McGovern.

It is safe to say that when the time comes, some of the aspirants for city commissioner will have a platform which includes keeping the sidewalks clean. That is, maybe they will. Present experience is that they won't.

Let me sell him fried chicken and eggs and fish.

As only a landlord can.

Let me charge him five prices for what he gets.

Let me trim him of all his dough;

Let me sell gasoline at two dollars a quart.

To make his gas buggy go.

Let me serve a la-carte, also table d'hôte.

Let me charge any price that I wish.

And I'll be a friend to man.

Simple Things.

Some folks are prone to mope about and find a little fault and out about their walks in life; they long to do the greatest things, and soar aloft on eagles' wings, but shun life's toil and life, they seek to conquer worlds or naught, and that is why they die never sought to help in times of need;

that's why they fail to make the grade, and always linger in the shade—at last to go to seed. 'Tis better far to earn a cent, then loaf all day of life

'spent in pouting and complaint; 'tis better to do the deeds that help to make a better man of self, and hold pride in making wood or weaving tons of coal, than lying idle half the year and living in the mortal fear one will not reach his goal. The thirty hen that lays the egg, is not seen standing on one leg or leaning 'gainst a post;

she's digging busily away from early morn till close of day and never stops to boast. And so the man the highest up got there because he'd share his laborer or king. He didn't hesitate to do the tasks which might appear to you as just the simple things.

Afterthoughts.

A SAFE INVESTMENT

Municipal Bonds have long been regarded as the safest form of investment known. The interest and principal are payable through direct taxation, and the taxes are generally sanctioned by popular vote. Tax levies are irrevocable. Furthermore, under the provisions of the new Federal Income Tax Law municipal bonds are exempt from taxation and no certificate of ownership is required when bond or coupons are deposited at bank for collection.

Their selection has been made with SECURITY as the first consideration, and the legality of issuance has been approved by municipal bond attorneys who are experts in their line. We, therefore, have no hesitation in recommending them for investment by the most careful and exacting purchasers.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

ORNAMENTAL EARS.

THEY say a man's features express his character and personality. But there are a great many people in this world who would have enormous mouths and almost invisible ears if this were literally true. In case you do not readily recognize the type I mean, let me introduce you to one of them.

I met her last summer. She was a charming, vivacious woman, delightful to meet and most interesting to talk with. It seemed to me at first that I had never known her a day. I realized that I had overestimated her. For she had been giving out intelligence but not the receiving intelligence.

Did you ever have your telephone get out of order so that while you could speak into it and make your self heard perfectly, you couldn't hear a thing the party at the other end of the line was saying? Well, this woman's personality was like that. She could talk but she couldn't listen.

When she was talking she was all animation and vivacity, but when other people talked she became inert and distant.

If you referred to what others had said on previous occasions she usually looked blank. Either she had not listened at all, or had somehow failed to take it in.

She was very well read and was always quick to adduce a pat quotation or an interesting anecdote. But when someone capped hers with another as good, she never seemed interested, but slipped quickly away into some other subject.

Now this woman was of course an exaggerated and unusual example of the type of intelligence which it is quick to give. But I think the milder examples of the type are to be found everywhere. Most of them do not display this when others are talking, indeed they always keep a bright surface of alertness and interest. But it is only a surface, as you soon find out if you come to know them.

I remember a woman of this type at a boarding house at which I once took my meals. To the usual observer she was a most sympathetic listener, able at least twice, and the first woman had all the appearance of listening to her. And yet a day or two later when it rained and the lady who the lost umbrella came downstairs bemoaning her lack of protection, and addressed some remark about it directly to this woman, she said brightly, "What, have you lost your umbrella, isn't that too bad?"

Dears in the house are not particularly beautiful things, so I suppose they were given us to use rather than to wear as ornaments. And to use to listen to other people's voices as well as to our own.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To dispose of the tin cans in the winter time, burn them in your furnace coal stoves; not only gets rid of the cans that accumulate, but helps to clean out the chimney as well.

Flower vases with long necks can be cleaned by filling them with hot water and small pieces of newspaper. Shake vigorously and you will find that the paper will remove all the dust and sediment from the inside.

A linged shelf is a great comfort to the housekeeper in the kitchen.

Applying lemon oil to your stoves will keep them from rusting.

THE TABLE.

Italian Pancakes—Make a batter of a cupful of milk, three eggs beaten light, a saltspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of white flour. Beat hard and set aside for an hour. Put a little butter in a frying-pan, and when very hot pour enough batter to cover the bottom of the pan. When brown on one side, turn and brown on the other. Spread with jelly; cool and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Mince Pie—Beat two eggs very light and add a pint of flour and enough of a pint of milk to make it smooth. Put the remainder of the milk into a buttered saucepan, and a little salt and white pepper to a boil and add lightly the egg and the flour mixture. Let it cook well and serve immediately with the following simple sauce. Rich milk or cream sweetened to taste and flavored with nutmeg.

Baked Salmon—Wipe your fish with a damp cloth, but do not lay it in water. Rub with a little salad oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Lay in a baking-pan and dash over it a cupful of boiling water in which two tablespoonfuls of butter have been melted. Bake, covered, basting every fifteen minutes. When done, transfer to a hot platter and set in the open oven while you thicken the gravy left in the pan with cornstarch wet with cold water, and season it with lemon juice and a dash of onion juice. A little tomato catsup is an improvement. Boil up once and pour into a gravy-bowl. Send to the table with the salmon, which may be garnished with sprigs of parsley.

Crafton Cake—Cream together three tablespoonfuls of butter with two cupfuls of sugar and beat until the yolks of three eggs, whipped light. Add a cupful of cold water and two cupfuls of sifted flour. Stir in, then the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff, and another cupful of flour into the mixture. Add one level teaspoonful of baking powder, flavor with a half-teaspoonful of nutmeg and cinnamon, mixed. Pour into a pan and bake.

Orange Shortcake—Sift into one and one-half cupfuls of flour one level teaspoonful of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Rub into this with the tips of the fingers one-third of a cup of butter and moisten with milk enough to make a soft dough. Divide the dough in halves and spread over the bottom of two tins. When done butter the cakes, add the sauce and bake. When done butter the cakes, sift over each powdered sugar, and put between them thin slices of peeled oranges.

Chili Con Carne—Two pounds of steak, red chilies, two cloves, one tablespoonful of flour, a little garlic, thyme, drippings. Seed the chilies and cover with boiling water. Soak until tender and when the pulp is tender, add the meat and the chili. Simmer until the meat is tender and the gravy is of the right consistency.

Tooth Talks

A little girl at school one morning raised her hand for permission to speak to the teacher, and when the teacher asked what it was, Mary replied I have such a toothache that I cannot study my lesson. Of course the teacher and every one else knew that Mary could not learn her lesson while suffering with a toothache, so Mary was excused to go home. Possibly the toothache would ease for a day or two and Mary starts in again with one day's lesson behind to make up. All of a sudden it starts in again, and Mary goes home again, another day's study lost. Next month and Mary loses more days of study which is interfering with Mary's prospects of promotion for next term. Possibly this will be one of those times when Mary comes badly swollen, and Mary has a high temperature, and when the vitality is lowered, becomes restless and feverish, and a physician may be called. Mary has not only physically deteriorated but has gotten work to her classmates, she has hard work to catch up and keep up, owing to her weakened condition. Had this girl been practicing mouth hygiene every day as she should, at least one of these troubles might have been prevented. Next time these same conditions may appear again with other or the same teeth. If there is anything that will upset one's nervous system, a good toothache will surely come in for distinct notice. There isn't anything of so much value to prevent decay of the teeth and the after effects, as cleanliness of the mouth. To those that have never practiced mouth hygiene there is a great surprise in store for, and those that are doing so, even in a small way, are realizing benefits every day.

Growing children who are continually changing size and shape every day, receive more benefit from oral hygiene than grown people, because their systems are so susceptible to influences, good or bad. A poorly nourished child soon becomes weak, and a weak child gains when the proper conditions have been provided. The preventorium that have been established have proven what can be done for a child that is in a weakened condition, showing the susceptibility of children whose better conditions have been provided. Preventorium are to prevent continued low vitality which makes one an easy prey for tubercular and other diseases that mean early termination of life. Hospitals and sanitariums are erected for the purpose of restoring health to those that have lost it, all of which is of great value. Prevention is not only always better, but is cheaper also than cure. Engraving a padlock and attaching it to the barn door, is a lot better than chasing the horse thief for a week after the horse is stolen.

Question of Sentiment.
If you like the girl, she's vivacious; otherwise, she's too blamed noisy.—Atchison Globe.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of twenty-three and in love with a young man two years my senior, who is the brother of my lady friend. I have been engaged to him for two months. I visited my lady friend, who lives out of town. As I arrived at her home, she kissed me and wished me to be her sister-in-law. The young man was very attentive to me and he said some nice things to me. I acted differently as I came home. I told my people about it. Knowing how much I cared for him, they wrote him a letter telling him I was very much discouraged. Please help me fix this matter.

I care for him, but don't want to throw myself at him, a grave mistake. The man's sister might like to have you for a sister-in-law, but that is no indication that the young man desires you for a wife. Tell your people to stop writing to him and make up your mind to like somebody else until this young man tells you that he loves you and wants you to marry him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) My hair is awful greasy and will not stay up. I have tried washing it in horse hair but it does no good. Could you tell me something that would make it look dry and smooth?

(2) Do you know of anything that will keep my hair in wave?

(3) Isorris root good for the hair, and how do you use it?

(4) Do you know of anything that will take off stubborn freckles? I have tried quite a few different things but they did me no good.

BERTHA.

(1) For oily hair mix 2 oz. alcohol and 14 gr. resorcin. Use this daily, rubbing well into the scalp.

(2) To make the hair curly combine 130 gr. potassium carbonate, 1 fluid dram ammonia water, 12 fluid drams alcohol, and enough rosewater to make 16 fluid ounces. Moisten the hair with this, adjust it loosely and it will curl when drying.

(3) Orris root is used as a dry shampoo. It is sprinkled generously through the hair, then brushed out. I cannot recommend the dry shampoo as a regular thing, as it has a tendency to clog the pores in the scalp, which is bad for the hair.

(4) The only way to take off freckles is to take off the skin. The freckles will always return, even then. If you skin yourself too much you will find that your face will look like leather in short time. I cannot conscientiously recommend anything stronger than the juice of a lemon for freckles. Even this is too strong for a delicate skin. Better save your skin even if you must have freckles, and keep from having more freckles by wearing wide-brimmed hats and veils when you go out in the sun.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a boy nearly two years and he says he loves me and I love him. We are engaged to be married, but we haven't set any date yet. The other night we went to a dance and I came home before the dance broke up and he came home with me, and then went back to the hall and went home

Women Worth While

MADAME ALI KULI KHAN.

By Selene Armstrong Harmon.
Enter the drawing room of the Persian legation at Washington. You find in this one apartment an epitome of all the exquisite arts of Persia.

For window draperies there are priceless old shawls, through the rich reds and blues of which the sunlight streams as through the stained glass windows of a chapel. No pictures adorn the walls. Instead of these, are hung with tapestries cloth of gold, with rich settings embroidered in shining sequins of gold, and with more old shawls of Cashmir. Into the tortuous detail of these precious fabrics are wrought poems in Arabic and Persian, legends and romances of the Orient.

For bric-a-brac there are rare vessels of copper inlaid with gold; boxes painted centuries ago, on which the nightingale sings to the rose in a Persian garden; silver baskets that might be of lace, so fine is their workmanship. The floors are covered with rugs, once part of the wealth of Persian palaces, into which is woven all the beauty of color and design which the Oriental mind has conceived. And every room in the legation holds a like treasure of art and ancient fabrics and objects.

The woman who presides over this fascinating domicile is Madame Ali Kuli Khan, upon whom the Persian government has conferred a title of honor, Moravesh-es-Sultaneh. Madame Khan is the wife of Mirza Ali Kuli Khan, the Persian charge d'affaires at Washington. She belongs to a group of American women in the diplomatic corps who are performing a notable service to America in the strengthening and cementing of our friendship with other nations of the earth.

Before her marriage to the representative of one of the oldest and noblest families in Persia, Madame Ali was Miss Florence Breed of Boston. Two years after her marriage she visited Persia with her distinguished husband. There, robed in the flowing garments of the Orient and veiled after the manner of Persian women, Madame Ali had opportunity to study the life and customs of these women as intimately as if she had been born among them. With the éclat attending a princess of the blood, she was presented at the court of Persia. She was not only given the title of honor, Moravesh-es-Sultaneh, by Persia's crowned head, but was presented with the "golden decoration" of learning, a little medal star-shaped, jewel-encrusted, and never bestowed upon any woman not born in Persia.

Madame Khan is the mother of three of the quaintest and most charming children in Washington, Rahim Khan, a boy; Marzieh Khanom, a girl; and Hamid Khan, a girl. These children chatter in Persian, speak French just as fluently and talk English as do all American-born children. Also, they speak Arabic.

EVERYDAY TALKS FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

The other afternoon a young boy entering his parents' home sank into a convenient chair and said: "I've visited every factory in this town looking for work, even the warehouses; nothing doing; the girls have everything snatched up."

"His mother, who has plenty of sons, but one little girl, was of course all on the boy's side of the argument. She voiced her opinion in no mild terms about the girls who worked so cheap and took the boys' places in many of the factories. Well! Agitation is not a good paying profession so let us not enter it, but did you ever stop to think that, if some of the mothers who rail at the conditions of things would instead train their sons to meet these conditions, how much better it might be?"

"The girls are not to blame for working," are they. So many of our boys grow up without a trade, without any qualifications to enter the world in a man's place that the girls have to keep right on working because the boys are not able to support a home and family."

If the parents of every boy would teach him to be a "sticker" to know how to do one thing well, to be able to go out and qualify for work along some special line, to do that one thing so well that the man behind the desk would decide that he did want help; that your son was worth trying out on account of the way he looked and acted and claimed he could do things; say, would that not be putting in a woman's time in a way that the very angels could not improve on?

It is a popular belief that a boy is easier to raise than a girl, because you can shunt the responsibilities of a boy's actions on the company he kept the way he stayed out nights; almost you can blame the weather. You need never take a bit of blame if your son develops into a human tornado.

They leave the boys to a Topsy process. They can just "come up." Maybe if they put a little check rein on the boys in the process of raising

OHIO UNIVERSITY CO-EDS FAVOR THE SIMPLE LIFE

[SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE.]

Columbus, Feb. 18.—The co-eds of the Ohio state university have returned to the simple life. After today the first year girls will no longer have their heads in a whirl as the result of "rushing" parties. Acting under the direction of the newly established board of censorship, the Woman's Pan-Hellenic Association, a university organization, adopted these resolutions:

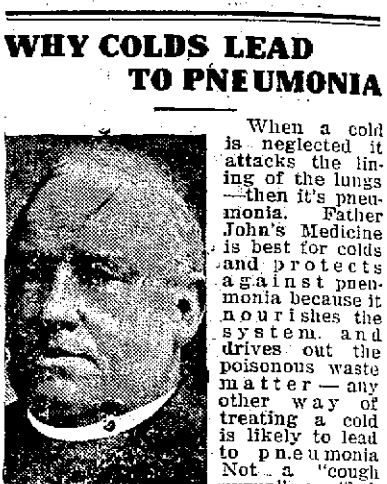

"We will accept only the moderated forms of the standard dances, barring all conspicuous forms. We approve of simplicity of dress for formal functions and greater simplicity for rushing. There shall be one week of rushing, each sorority giving one party, the cost of which shall not in any case exceed $50. We are resolved to do away with the expense and fuss of former years."

"Everybody's doing it!" Doing what? Reading the want ads.

WOMAN COULD NOT SIT UP

Now Does Her Own Work.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

Ironton, Ohio.—"I am enjoying better health now than I have for twelve years. When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could not sit up. I had female troubles and was very nervous. I used the remedies a year and I can do my work and for the last eight months I have worked for other women, too. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for I know I never would have been as well if I had not taken it and I recommend it to suffering women."

Daughter Helped Also.
"I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen years old. She was in school and was a nervous wreck, and could not sleep nights. Now she looks so healthy that even the doctor speaks of it. You can publish this letter if you like."—Mrs. RENA BOWMAN, 161 S. 10th Street, Ironton, Ohio.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out and drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Make This and Try It for Coughs

This Home-Made Remedy has no Equal for Prompt Results.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. This simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually conquers an ordinary cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchitis. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps and a cough. This makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this plan. Making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful mixture has never been equaled. A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

She had arrived at the house an hour or two before the time set for the ceremony, in company with the widow. True to her resolution, the widow of Challis Randall had remained away from the home of his people until the last hour. She had been consulted, to be sure, in regard to the final arrangements, but the meetings had taken place in her own apartment, many blocks distant from the house in lower Fifth avenue. The afternoon before she had received Redmond Randall and Leslie, his son. She had not sent for them. They came perfunctorily and not through any sense of obligation. These two at least knew that sympathy was not what she wanted, but peace. Twice during the two trying days, Leslie had come to see her, Vivian telephoned.

On the occasion of his first visit, Leslie had met the guest in the house. The second time he called, he made it a point to ask Sara all about her. It was he who gently closed the door after the two women when, on the morning of the funeral, they entered the dark, flower-laden room in which stood the casket containing the body of his brother. He left them alone together in that room for half an hour or more, and it was he who went forward to meet them when they came forth. Sara leaned on his arm as she ascended the stairs to the room where the others were waiting. The ashen-faced girl followed, her eyes lowered, her gloved hands clenched.

Mrs. Randall, the elder, kissed Sara and drew her down beside her on the couch. To her own surprise, as well as that of the others, Sara broke down and wept bitterly. After all, she was sorry for Challis' mother. It was the human instinct, she could not hold out against it. And the older woman put away the ancient grudge she held against this mortal enemy and dissolved into tears of real compassion.

A little later she whispered brokenly in Sara's ear: "My dear, my dear, this has brought us together. I hope you will learn to love me."

Sara caught her breath, but uttered no word. She looked into her mother-in-law's eyes, and smiled through her tears. The Randall, looking on in amazement, saw the smile reflected in the face of the older woman. Then it was that Vivian crossed quickly and put her arms about the shoulders of her sister-in-law. The white flag on both sides.

Hetty Castleton stood alone and wavering, just inside the door. No stranger situation could be imagined than the one in which this unfortunate girl found herself at the present moment. She was virtually in the hands of those who would destroy her; she was in the house of those who most deeply were affected by her act on that fatal night. Among them all she stood, facing them, listening to the moans and sobs, and yet her limbs did not give way beneath her.

Some one gently touched her arm. It was Leslie. She shrank back, a fearful look in her eyes. In the semi-darkness he failed to note the expression.

"Won't you sit here?" he asked, indicating the little pink divan against the wall. "Forgive me for letting you stand so long."

She looked about her, the wild light still in her eyes. She was like a rat in a trap.

Her lips parted, but the word of thanks did not come forth. A strange, inarticulate sound, almost a gasp, came instead. Pallid as a ghost, she dropped limply to the divan, and dug her fingers into the satiny seat. As if fascinated, she stared over the black heads of the three women immediately in front of her at the full-length portrait hanging where the light from the hall fell upon it: the portrait of a dashing youth in riding logs.

A moment later Sara Randall came over and sat beside her. The girl shivered as with a mighty chill when the warm hand of her friend fell upon hers and enveloped it in a firm clasp. "His mother kissed me," whispered Sara. "Did you see?"

The girl could not reply. She could only stare at the open door. A small, hatchet-faced man had come up from below and was nodding his head to Leslie Randall—a man with short side whiskers, and a sepulchral look in his eyes. Then, having received a sign from Leslie, he tiptoed away. Almost instantly the voices of people singing softly came from some distant remote part of the house.

And then, a little later, the perfectly modulated voice of a man in prayer.

Back of her, Randalls, beside her, Randalls; beneath her, friends of the Randalls; outside, the rabble, those who would join with these black, raven-like specters in tearing her to pieces if they but knew!

The droning voice came up from below, each well-chosen word distinct and clear: tribute beautiful to the irreproachable character of the deceased. Leslie watched the face of the girl, curiously fascinated by the set, emotionless features, and yet without a conscious interest in her. He was fully sensible to the fact that she was beautiful, uncommonly beautiful. It did not occur to him to feel that she was out of place among them, that she belonged down stairs. Somehow she was a part of the surroundings, like the specter at the feast.

If he could have witnessed all that transpired while Sara was in the room below with her guest—her companion, as he had come to regard her without having in fact been told as much—he would have been lost in a maze of the most overwhelming emotions. To go back: The door had barely closed behind the two women when Hetty's trembling knees gave way beneath her. With a low moan of horror, she slipped to the floor, covering her face with her hands.

Sara knelt beside her. "Come," she said gently, but firmly: "I must exact this much of you. If we are to go on together, as we have planned, you must stand beside me at his bier. Together we must look upon him for the last time. You must see him as I saw him up there in the country. I had my cruel blow that night. It is your turn now. I will not blame you for what you did. But if you expect me to go on believing that you did a brave thing that night, you must convince me that you are not a coward now. It is the only test I shall put you to. Come; I know it is hard. I know it is terrible, but it is the true test of your ability to go through with it to the end. I shall know then that you have the courage to face anything that may come up."

She waited a long time, her hand on the girl's shoulder. At last Hetty arose.

"You are right," she said hoarsely. "I should not be afraid."

Later on they sat over against the wall beyond the casket, into which they had peered with widely varying emotions. Sara had said:

"You know that I loved him."

The girl put her hands to her eyes and bowed her head.

"Oh, how can you be so merciful to me?"

"Because he was not," said Sara, white-lipped. Hetty glanced at the half-averted face with queer, indescribable expression in her eyes.

If Leslie Randall could have looked in upon them at that moment, or at any time during the half an hour that followed, he would have known who was the slayer of his brother, but it is doubtful if he could have had the heart to denounce her to the world.

When they were ready to leave the room Hetty had regained control of her nerves to a most surprising extent, a condition unmistakably due to the influence of the older woman.

"I can trust myself now, Mrs. Randall," said Hetty steadily as they hesitated for an instant before turning the knob of the door.

"Then I shall ask you to open the door," said Sara, drawing back.

Without a word or a look, Hetty opened the door and permitted the other to pass out before her. Then she followed, closing it gently, even deliberately, but not without a swift glance over her shoulder into the depths of the room they were leaving.

Of the two, Sara Randall was the paler as they went up the broad staircase with Leslie.

The funeral oration by the Rev. Dr. Maltby dragged on. Among all his hearers there was but one who believed the things he said of Challis Randall, and she was one of two persons who, so they saying goes, are the last to find a man out; his mother and his sister. But in this instance the mother was alone. The silent, attentive guests on the lower floor listened in grim approval; Dr. Maltby was doing himself proud. Not one but all of them knew that Maltby knew. And yet how soothing he was.

By the end of the week the murder of Challis Randall was forgotten by all save the police. The inquest was over, the law was baffled, the city was serenely waiting for its next sensation. No one cared.

Leslie Randall went down to the steamer to see his sister-in-law off for Europe.

"Goodby, Miss Castleton," he said, as he shook the hand of the slim young Englishwoman at parting. "Take good care of Sara. She needs a friend; a good friend, now. Keep her over there until she has—forgotten."

CHAPTER V.

Discussing a Sister-in-Law.
"You remember my sister-in-law, don't you, Brandy?" was the question that Leslie Randall put to a friend one afternoon, as they sat drowsily in a window of one of the fashionable uptown clubs, a little more than a year after the events described in the foregoing chapters. Drearly, I have said, for the reason that it was Sunday, and raining at that.

"I met Mrs. Randall a few years ago in Rome," said his companion, renewing interest in a conversation that had died some time before of its own exhaustion. "She's most attractive. I saw her but once. I think it was at somebody's fête."

"She's returning to New York the end of the month," said Leslie. "Been abroad for over a year. She had a villa at Nice this winter."

"I remember her quite well. I was of an age then to be particularly sensitive to female loveliness. If I'd been staying on in Rome, I should have screwed up the courage, I'm sure, to have asked her to sit for me."

Brandon Booth was of an old Philadelphia family: an old and wealthy family. Both views considered, he was qualified to walk hand in glove with the fastidious Randalls. Leslie's mother was charmed with him because she was also the mother of Vivian. The fact that he went in for portrait painting and seemed averse to subsisting on the generosity of his father, preferring to live by his talent, in no way operated against him, so far as Mrs. Randall was concerned. That was his lookout, not hers; if he elected to that sort of thing, all well and good. He could afford to be eccentric; there remained, in the perspective he scorned, the bulk of a huge fortune to offset whatever idiosyncrasies he might choose to cultivate. Some day, in spite of himself, she contended serenely, he would be very, very rich. What could be more desirable than fame, family and fortune all heaped together and thrust upon one exceedingly interesting and handsome young man?

He had been the pupil of celebrated draftsmen and painters in Europe, and had exhibited a sincerity of purpose that was surprising, all things considered. The more fact that he was not obliged to paint in order to obtain a living was sufficient cause for wonder among the artists he met and studied with or under.

His studio in New York was not a fashionable resting place. It was a workshop. You could have tea there, of course, and you were sure to meet people you knew and liked, but it was quite as much of a workshop as any you could mention. He was not a dabbler in art, not a mere dabber of pigments; he was an artist.

Booth was thirty—perhaps a year or two older; tall, dark and good looking. The air of the thoroughbred marked him. He did not affect loose, flowing cravats and baggy trousers, nor was he careless about his fingernails. He was simply the ordinary, every-day sort of chap you would meet in Fifth avenue during parade hours, and you would take a second look at him because of his face and manner but not on account of his dress. Some of his ancestors came over ahead of the Mayflower, but he did not boast.

Leslie Randall was his closest friend and harshest critic. It didn't really matter to Booth what Leslie said of his paintings; he quite understood that he didn't know anything about them.

It was young Mrs. Robinson's first dinner party, and she was suffering all the usual terrors of the inexperienced hostess.

However, the cook rose to the occasion splendidly, and so far as the dinner itself was concerned, Mrs. Robinson was delighted.

The only fly in the ointment was Jane, Jane was the new parlor maid; she was slow, clumsy, and her waiting was bad. But, in addition to these faults, she insisted on keeping her mouth wide open.

This so got on Mrs. Robinson's nerves that at last she exclaimed: "Jane, your mouth is wide open!" Jane withdrew her gaze from the ceiling and said, looking down with a cheery smile: "I know it is, ma'am; I opened it myself!"

Dollar Day

Wednesday, Feb. 25th,

The Biggest Event Ever Planned By Janesville Merchants

That Dollar Day, Wednesday, February 25th, will be the biggest day in the point of attendance and sales that the local dealers have ever experienced is the general consensus of opinion. The hundreds of inquiries received about the day and the general interest its announcements have created, point the way to assured success.

What Is Dollar Day?

It is one day upon which all the merchants of a city combine to offer the public one rousing sale and to give added attractiveness a single dollar is made the price of all bargain offers. The point is to make the day of as much value as may be to every possible customer and it is felt that a dollar is a thing that can be secured and saved for this day by everyone it is possible to reach.

What Dollar Day Offers the Customer

While the day is essentially to allow local merchants to attract crowds to their places of business and to increase their sales it is to the customer within reach of this city that the day is of real value. The merchant simply turns his goods into money in many instances at cost or less than cost, while the buyer is allowed the opportunity of buying, for the one day only, at a figure that must result in a considerable saving. Money saved and expended on this day will purchase far more than it will the day before or the day after. A dollar thus saved is as valuable as a dollar earned.

"Last year I bought a canary," said a little woman to her neighbor the other day. "Then I happened to have a bright idea. As bright ideas were the exception, not the rule with me I decided to follow this particular idea up. I purchased a mate for my canary and started a canary farm. I won't trouble you with details, for it was up-hill work, but I was persistent, and I am fifty-two dollars richer on account of my canary farm. I also have had the experience, pleasure (for it was pleasure to care for the birds) and knowledge that I did not possess a year ago."

"How did I sell them? Why through the want ad columns of my home paper of course. I'd never attempt to dispose of them without advertising. My advertising has disposed of my birds and also given me a place in the eyes of the public as a dealer in birds."
